

*“Advice and counsel that is concise, timely,
on-point and cost-effective.”*

Partner Ted Banks Quoted in Crain's Chicago Business About Antitrust Litigation

Partner Ted Banks was quoted in Crain's Chicago Business about the reasons why a company might set aside a reserve to cover possible expenses due to antitrust litigation. Banks noted that setting aside a reserve does not automatically show that the company is admitting guilt in an antitrust matter. Even if the company believes it has strong defenses, settling a lawsuit might be a prudent business move since it avoids the uncertainty and expense of litigation.

To read the full article click here.